Emmy-Award winning journalist Kendall Tenney is a highly sought-after crisis communication consultant and media specialist whose successful career in TV journalism spanned nearly two decades.

Tenney anchored Southern Nevada's number one newscast for nearly 15 years and received multiple Emmy's, Murrow's and other national awards along the way. He was frequently named Las Vegas' favorite news personality.

In 2010, Tenney decided to draw on his experience to launch 10e Media, a public relations firm that specializes in crisis communication, video content creation and media training. He assembled a team of highly respected former journalists and public relations experts to help individuals and corporations deliver clear and consistent messages to their intended audiences. 10e clients range from large corporations to political leaders to colleges and nonprofits.

10e Media seminars have become increasingly popular with the proliferation of social media and the growing importance of knowing how to avoid common communication pitfalls. Tenney now travels the country conducting seminars and delivering keynotes about how to effectively communicate core values and messages under intense pressure and scrutiny.

In addition to running 10e Media, Tenney also hosts Las Vegas Now, a daily lifestyle show on Las Vegas' CBS affiliate.
