A MESSAGE FROM

President
Douglas

I am sure that over the past few weeks you have heard a lot of buzz around the college's Top 10 Key Performance Indicators (KPIs). If you attended the Spring Professional Day, you saw my presentation outlining the KPIs and why KPIs are important within higher education. I received feedback that it was challenging to read the type on the slide presentation. I apologize and have attached the slides to this article in their entirety for you to review.

In the weeks ahead, we will provide an overview of each indicator in Bristol Weekly. In the meantime, I would like to provide some context around KPIs and the importance they bring to the college. Simply, they are a quick snapshot into what we are doing well and what we need to work on.

The Bristol Board of Trustees has adopted ten "top" KPIs. These KPIs will allow the Board of Trustees to have the specific data necessary to evaluate how the college is doing in comparison to other Massachusetts community colleges and the range that we are currently performing, defined as clear, caution or alert. Individually, KPIs tell a story about the various layers of the student experience and outline pathways for success such as our Title III grant initiative, "Pathways to the Future." Together, they provide a story of student success and our performance as an institution.

COMCAST

From a desk in his three-Frankford apartment in 2009, an unemployed Kevin Caesar launched his radio career, with a cup of coffee and a cigarette in hand, and a Radio Shack microphone at the ready. When the mic cut on, Caesar transformed into Mutha Knows — a brash, unapologetically gay, speller of ton.

A decade later, Caesar wakes up thousands a cross the city as his alter ego Mutha Knows, Power 99 host, the one who got the city talking about the power of love.

The Ins and Outs of Internships

By Drew Fawcett

"Students often have their 'aha' moment during an internship," says Tania Velazquez, Director of Career Services/Cooperative Education at Suffolk County Community College. "Through hands-on experience, an internship will help students realize if they are pursuing a career that's right for them. Conversely, it will also let a student know if the career may not be a good fit."

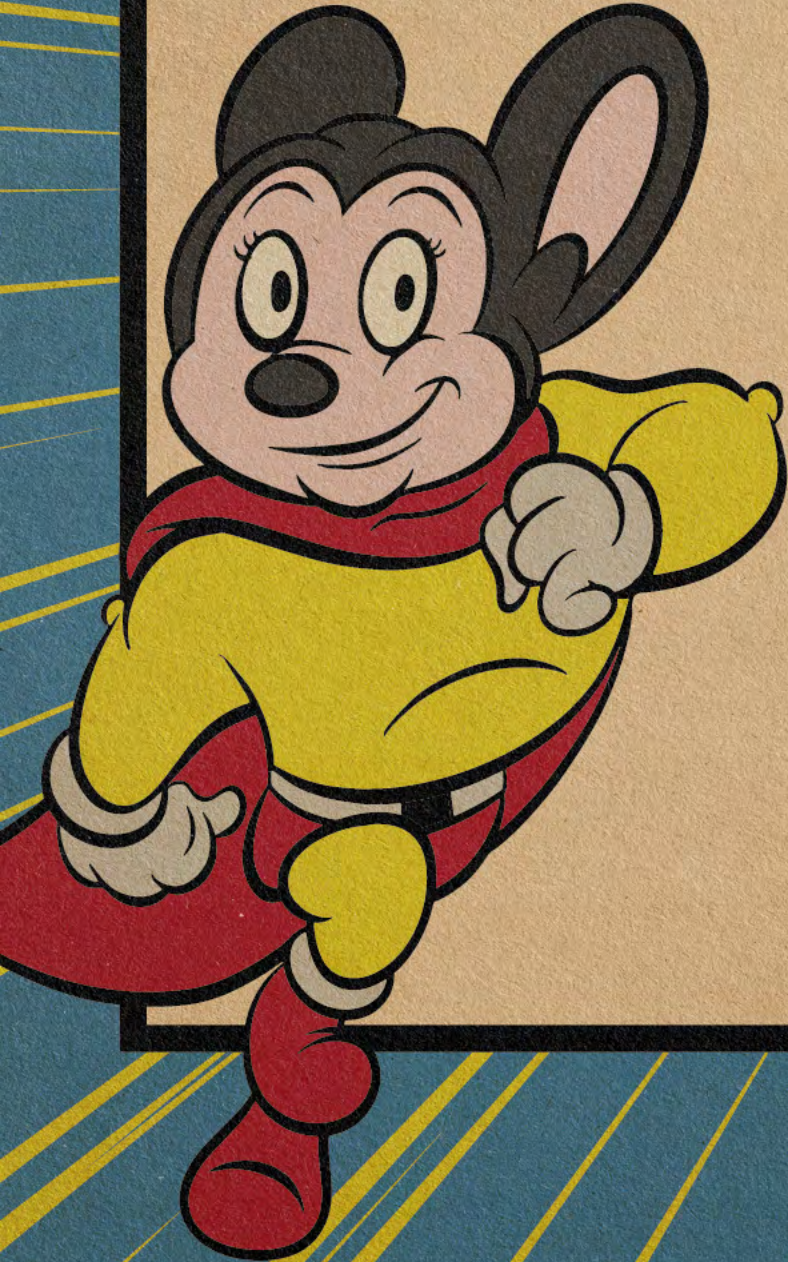

The National Association of Colleges and Employers (NACE) reported in their 2018 Student Survey that students overwhelmingly felt that experiential opportunities, like internships, positively contributed to career readiness. In fact, nearly 80% of students responding to the survey who had an internship and/or co-op experience said their professionalism and work ethic were "very" or "extremely" improved by the experience. Most of these students cited improved teamwork/collaboration competencies and enhanced oral and written communication skills.

In her final semester at Suffolk, Annabelle Bentley has been interning at the Riverhead Foundation for Marine Research and Preservation. The rescue and rehabilitation organization is affiliated with the Long Island Aquarium and is dedicated to the conservation and preservation of marine mammals and sea turtles. The internship has validated Ms. Bentley's ambition to achieve a career in marine biology. "It's enhanced my love for marine animals," she says. "I've learned so much in such a short amount Tania Velazquez, Suffolk's Director of Career Services/Cooperative Education, is passionate about matching students with valuable, hands-on learning experiences.

Making Lemonade After College Rejection

Posted on August 30, 2018

If your student was rejected, wait-listed, or priced out of their chosen college, here is a gentle reminder that it takes lemons to make lemonade. You have options, and sometimes they work out better than you would have imagined.

Option #1: Take a Gap Year

Taking a gap year, or a year off between high school and college to travel or work, has become trendy among some high school graduates. This path is best suited to ambitious graduates who can plan how to spend their year productively and have the willpower to avoid the Xbox and couch. These graduates often seek out internships where they can learn more about a potential career.

The goal is to re-apply to colleges for the following year. It's generally accepted among Admissions counselors that the year off will help the student become more mature and focus on what they want from their college experience. Students who take a gap year will want to be able to explain how the experience changed them for the better.

"Each of us is more than the worst thing we've ever done."

~ Bryan Stevenson

Delaware Tech student James Elliott is motivated and inspired by these words from public interest lawyer Bryan Stevenson, who has dedicated his career to helping the poor, the incarcerated, and the condemned.

Elliott, who by all accounts is a model student today, was not always the driven, successful young man he is now. Though he readily admits that his loving family gave him every opportunity to succeed, he still went down the wrong path as a teen and young adult. Labeled as a "problem child" in middle school, Elliott said the characterization was a self-fulfilling prophecy. He began
